PAST

Nova House is a full-service conference centre with a difference.

With its beautifully preserved Victorian interiors, you can't imagine a finer setting for an important business meeting.

Nova House, itself, is a listed building in the finest traditions of 19th century Bristol.

Discreetly positioned off Baldwin Street – the hub of trading in Bristol for centuries – it has just the right atmosphere for any presentation.

Each suite enjoys its own sense of history, yet is furnished with the most up-to-date conference facilities.

This unique combination of Victorian antiquity and modern technology has earned Nova House an enviable reputation in today's business world.

Where else can you enjoy a genuine sense of occasion enhanced by original stain glass windows, ornate cornicing and ceiling work, and stately oak panelling?

You will not find higher standards of comfort or decor anywhere.

PRESENT

We may have a distinguished past, but we live very much in the present.

For this reason, we've created with style and subtlety an environment fitting for your most important clients.

Whatever your requirements may be, you'll find we can easily accommodate them.

Our past experience ranges from the practical demonstrations, sales drives, audio visual presentations, formal board meetings; right through to lavish catering for both small or large numbers of people, and we have a range of sample menus available.

And we can provide both technical and advisory staff who work to the very highest standards of professionalism.

There are three suites at your disposal: Woollett Room. Seats up to thirty people for 'round-the-table' meetings.

Small Conference Room. Seats up to fifteen people for 'round-the-table' meetings. Here we can facilitate audio conference using 'Orator'.

Seminar Centre. This comfortably seats 50 people and offers multi-media seminar facilities.

These include television with Prestel, large screen television and video recorder, slide and cinema projectors, overhead projector and screen, and wipe-clean writing boards.

The furniture can also be arranged to give casual seating or a display environment.

FUTURE

Backed by the continual research and development of British Telecom, we offer the very latest in communications technology.

If ever you wondered what the conference of the future might be like, you only have to see our Confravision studio.

Unique to Nova House in Bristol, Confravision is British Telecom's Video-Conference-

Service. It's a way of linking you in sound and vision to studios in Bristol, London, Glasgow, Manchester, Birmingham, Ipswich and Belfast.

And it's now possible to link-up overseas with countries like America.

As a very straightforward conferencing medium, it can save you considerable time and money without any of the normal travel, expense, wasted time and fatigue.

Just think, a meeting that would normally take months to arrange and days to attend could be set-up and completed in a morning.

The Confravision studio seats up to fifteen people and has facilities for overflow viewing outside the studio if necessary.

To give you an idea of how Telecom is making advancements in other areas, you can walk round our Business Centre anytime.

On display you'll see switching systems, telex machines, fax machines and countless other machines to aid the efficiency of business communications.

Because Nova House is purpose designed, we believe our facilities more than match those of any hotel.

And we believe – as do our clients – that our rates compare favourably too.

For further details contact Alan Cleckner or Tessa Wilson, Nova House Conference Centre, Telephone Avenue, 10/11 Baldwin Street, Bristol, BS1 4BQ. Telephone: Bristol (0272) 296239 or 296710, Telex: 44122 BTBS G.

A warm reception.
